Message from Burford Hurry,
President - Mediterranean Gardening Association of Portugal

After a fairly warm start to our winter and some good rain, the cold has started, the first few almond blossoms are coming out and the spikes on the aloe are showing themselves. The reassuring cycle of life in the garden has begun. It shows that although temperatures and rainfall may vary, nature is still in control. For me it’s time to take stock of the garden and to decide what to do in it.

The ‘weeding’ has started too. Already the poppies are there amongst the wild geraniums and they require careful thinning as I don’t want to lose the poppies. As I do it I’m mindful of a gardening friend of mine who left a forest of wild geraniums in a large pot with spectacular effect when they flowered. Should I or shouldn’t I pull them out? I’m looking at bare branches too and thinking about what I should cut out or leave and how I should do it. Gardening means constantly making decisions whereas nature seems to solve such ‘problems’ with consummate ease and often with wonderful results.

Bearing that in mind Julia Thiemicke will be giving a talk on Permaculture at our Spring Fair on the 4th March, helping us to take a fresh look at how to integrate nature with gardening. There will be a talk too on making and using worm compost in the garden given by Nelson Lourenço.

For the first time at this event there will be access to the newly planted area for our Native Plant Demonstration Garden showing typical Barrocal vegetation together with guided tour. Our aim for this project is provide a long term and sustainable demonstration garden which can become a visitor destination and educational resource. Some initial cleaning and clearing has revealed the basic tree and shrub structure of this untouched barrocal habitat. Our plans include the addition of native species to increase biodiversity and encourage use of native plants in our own gardens. The MGAP Barrocal garden, although in its very early stages, is testament to our commitment to the growing of native plants in our gardens and to the initiative of those MGAP members who have worked so hard to get the project off the ground. We look forward to seeing you at the fair.

We need your help on our Management Committee so please consider joining us to help as Events Coordinator or Treasurer and be part of the group setting future priorities for the Association. I must also remind you that I will be stepping down as President at the 2017 AGM on April 1st so your nominations are needed for our new leader!

Once again, here’s wishing you good gardening. Burford Hurry

The Linnean Society of London holds a diverse programme of events which covers everything from plant and animal diversity to remote sensing and in vitro fertilisation. Most Linnean Society meetings are open to the public as well as members of the organisation.

Talks are available as podcasts via this link https://www.linnean.org/meetings-and-events/podcasts-of-events

A talk by Chris Thorogood on the Wildflowers of the Western Mediterranean is now available https://youtu.be/MvihtXWXjXy

The Western Mediterranean floristic region boasts one of the richest floras in the world. This talk explores the dazzling myriad of species which grow in the region in a ‘virtual tour’, from Portugal in the west to Italy in the east, the central Mediterranean islands, and North Africa. From rock roses and pines to the rare and bizarre such as wasp-duping orchids, fly-trapping arums and insect-eating Drosophyllum, the talk examines one of the world’s most diverse floras with an ecological slant on some fascinating plants, along with the stunning habitats in which they can be found.

Chris Thorogood FLS studied parasitic plant biology for his PhD at the University of Bristol where he then worked as a postdoctoral researcher. He currently studies the flora of the western Mediterranean basin and has a particular interest in parasitic plant speciation.

His book on the Wildflowers of the Western Mediterranean is available from MGAP.

International Spring Conference
10-13 May 2017
Based in Aix-en-Provence, garden tours, lectures and nursery visits

Mediterranean Gardening France (MGF - our sister organisation in MGi) has organised their first International Spring Conference for May 2017. This will be held to replace the Spring Event which has taken place in Portugal, so there will be no Spring Conference in Portugal in 2017.

There are some places available so please contact Christine Savage as soon as possible if you wish to take advantage of this very special opportunity.

MGF has arranged this special event with a view to exploring the connections between art and Mediterranean gardens. The welcome reception, lectures and final dinner will take place at the Hotel Aquabella, situated close to the historic centre of the city. Our lecturers will be garden designer, Laura de Beden and author, Louisa Jones. Aix-en-Provence is a lively and beautiful city, easy to explore on foot, and suggestions for outings and visits will be available in an information pack for those who would like to extend their stay.

For full programme see http://mediterraneangardeningfrance.org/baEvtAllAix%202017.pdf

Price for programme without accommodation is €275 per person

Residential packages are available, all details to be confirmed but please register your interest for more details and make bookings as soon as possible to secure your place direct with conference organiser Christine Savage email cs.savage@btopenworld.com
